

As the world becomes more complex and interdependent, however, this infinite complexity actually demands both respect and set limits. Especially in modern world, everyone and everything is interconnected more than ever, is the concept of boundaries still important? The answer is yes. The time of boundaryless nation is no longer the ethical social perspective in 21st century. The new era of all countries on earth must have their boundary and protected. The boundary represents sovereignty of one's country and the sovereignty of one's country is heart and soul of its people. Our nation, as everyone recognizes, as a nation of immigrant has become archaic and regard as a legacy of our ancestors' succession.. As we, American, are no longer naive to bear the same phenomenal of olds that instituted 200 years ago in current social catastrophic world. The migrants are waving onto the shore of the United States every years to escape poverty and pursue American dream. In fact, some immigrated legal or illegal, while some monopolized the immigration system. Inevitably, a change is needed to reform the U.S immigration policy, but it doesn't necessarily to abandon a traditional welcome immigrants scenario entirely that make us proud American but, that doesn't also make us to shut the doors or build the "Modern Great Wall of America" either. We need solutions that satisfy every American regardless of their beliefs and party line of obsession. Thus, out of many solution to strength our nation border security, obviously building the border wall in US-Mexico southern border is not one of them. We must find the root cause of globe immigration problem and how to solve the cause the solution.

In my viewpoint, the immigration is the result of extreme poverty and suffering, and the caravan from Honduras is the great example. This view is not only concentrating on the Southern border neighbouring countries, but concerns a global scale. Especially the powerful countries should stop muddling over poor countries' sovereignty and its liberty and start helping these countries to develop certain level of economic growth and establish democratic political landscape that benefit to both the U.S and participant country. As the result, the effort will eventually decrease people from defecting to another country or even to the U.S and encourage the potential migrants to stay and prosper in their own countries.

If we look at the root cause of global immigration crisis, it began with the people's historical mistreatment of indigenous people. For centuries, white people have abrogated onto themselves the right to invade and conquer the black and yellow world of the globe to extract minerals and other resources, including slaves and cheap labor. These invasions has affected many colonized countries' development even after they became independent. In 17th and 18th centuries' America, the African slaves were forced to work in many plantations and industries. During that period, many African people had been human trafficked to the U.S as slaves, and they eventually played big part in the U.S economic growth and development as country. Now that African populations has been growing as well as educated class, many white extremists begin to fuss and emerge racism toward the existence of African people in the U.S. It hadn't been long ago that black people gained right to vote and equal opportunity. Isn't that reherical that "enjoying the fruits of their labor but hating them for staying and prospering"? So does Mexican migrants in 1800s allowed for agricultures purpose and asian migrants to build railway road.

We are pleasure seeker. This is in our DNA and human ilk. People want to better their lives is phenomenal and main ingredient of our evolution. Our ancestor has been moving around for because of we all want to find the better live. That's nature of human desire and if that desire doesn't exist then we would not be here, and being proud American. While I was in the college library and writing this essay, there was one sociology student asking me to answer her survey paper about Native American. Anyone still know what Native American is. European conquered America in 15th century to find better land to find better life, while forcing out the Native American to their extinction. This Native America

In an article written by American Thinker, Rovvy Lepor, "President Trump's Wall of Compassion.", he highlighted President Trump as national savoir, who protects the southern border and his compassionate concerned over the future migrant to the U.S is intriguing. Rovvy supported Trump's decision to deploy military troops at the U.S-Mexico border to prevent the caravan from entering the U.S illegally or by forced or by any means. Rovvy stated that this was the act of compassion by President Trump and his policy was not only to defence the U.S border security, but his genuine concerns and empathy for those who traversed and risking their lives while crossing the dangerous Darien Gap jungle and desserts to the north as astonishing. To make the scenario worst, DHS reported that 10,000 migrants were expected and 8,200 migrants were already in Mexico, according to Mexican government. According to the report, 95% of the caravan being men and the Mexican ambassador to the U.S, Geronimo Gutierrez has confirmed the presence of criminals among the caravan. Rovvy has also described the Darien Gap jungle which separate Columbia and Panama and its danger that possess. Rovvy believe that President Trump's action to protect the southern border was the interest of the U.S national security and his policy also demonstrates only legal migrants are welcome and his humanitarian act to save the lives of many traversers who take arduous journey to the north. Therefore, American people should give President Trump a praise that he deserves for being compassionate about securing the southern border by building the physical border wall at any cost.

First of all, what make President Trump's a national savior just because of sending troops to the southern border to stop the caravan from entering the U.S? This is responsible as President of the United States, who solemnly swear to protect this nation. To be fair to Trump, sending the troops to the border wasn't a bad call either. It required the force to stop the other force and it was an acceptable decision. Even though those people in the caravan were seeking asylum to avoid extreme poverty in their own countries, they can't just walk through. Besides, did anyone read the news? Trump's whole election campaign, he taunted to build the border wall. Why did you think Trump would just welcome everyone with open arm? However, if we allowed this caravan into the U.S, the whole South American will follow suit. It will be a demographic shift.

Rovvy also described the danger of Darien Gap jungle and Trump's empathy on those traversers who take arduous journey to the north, risking their lives, which he simply wanted to promote Trump's agenda. The truth is that people make their choices and if the venture to the north toward opportunities and reward is worthwhile, despite the risks and the harsh separation from those they love, means life and hope, people would gladly take a shot at it. We have criminal living in the U.S.

Furthermore, Rovvy emphasized that Trump deserves to build the wall since he prevented the caravan. "Deserve" is an appropriate phrasing word, since this "Deserve" will cost you 5 billions dollars or more of the U.S taxpayer money, it is ironic to let it go. Besides, I strongly disagree on building the physical border wall in Southern Border. It will not help solving our immigration problem. Either way, the money 5 billions will be disappeared in the flick of the fingers. There will be hustling between constructors and some officials. Who knows maybe Trump may hire his son-in-law Jared Kushner's as contractor and obsolet all 5 billions into Trump's Empire. Many intelligence agencies, including border officers were reporting or showing President Trump that majority of migrants comes from tunnels, not over the ground. But he still ignored the fact and keep talking about building the physical wall. What about his campaign promise? He was saying, he will let the Mexican pay for the wall. And why is he asking from the Congress? We, american are inventors of electricity, internet, many modern technology. We are drone creator, the first to use the nuclear bomb in human history. Why not use technology as our advantage? Rather than, drawing back to medieval and building the concrete walls just like ancient chinese ancestor built "the Great Wall of Chinese". Let alone the cost of maintenance after its built. It will be like a money rain for contractors and other people who involve in this wall.

The caravan was a turning point for Trump's administration because this event gave the White House to poke on border funding from Congress, while posing threat to national security by unreasonable government shutdown. Besides, they made a new record for long shutdown in the U.S history. Nonetheless, the wall is not a priority in this country. We have President Trump may be the worst President to occupy in the oval office in the U.S history, he is also the most luckiest President, who doesn't have any major issues to deal with unlike his previous predecessor, who had to pick up the country from the ground, fought both domestically and internationally war and economic stability. Even though my imaginary seems naive, racial and clinche from human endorsement and inner benevolent nature, I still hope our hearts are boundaryless to share and help the humanity in better manner.
